

Katrin Fridriks

Born in 1974, Reykjavik (Iceland), Katrin Fridriks is an abstract painter who explores speed, gravity and the interactions of human beings with the forces of nature.

Fridriks artistic work focuses on the exploration of natural phenomena and the limits of human dexterity. Experimenting with both techniques and the strength and agility of her own body, Fridriks continuously pushes the limits of painterly expression. She has developed a set of different techniques in connection with her explorations many of which she now combines to create works of art that are truly unique.

As they are based on the exploration of fundamental experiences, Fridriks works are immediately captivating. Having different layers that unfold over time, each new contemplation is rewarding and gives way to discoveries.

Her art is deeply connected to nature, drawing its energy from the bright green valleys, glacier-cut fjords, black sand beaches, roaring rivers and steaming geysers of Iceland, a country where some of her earliest works converse directly with the landscapes where they are located. Her paintings, too, draw their power from a connection to the forces of nature. Even though Fridriks never represents nature mimetically, her works' connection to the natural world can be felt everywhere. They are "non-figurative" only in the most superficial sense as they really confront us not with the appearance of things, but with the fundamentals of existence on earth and beyond. Gravity, flow, energy, speed, impact and growth appear in condensed form, unbound by the various objects in the world. Relating to our most basic instincts, they captivate us on a level beyond understanding. In recent years, her preoccupation with the state of our planet has led her to also reflect on concerns like waste management and limited resources, discovering radically new ways to express these issues in her visual language.

Showcased at the Venice Biennale, Kjarval Museum & the Icelandic Art Center in Reykjavik, the Circle Culture in Berlin, the Museum Arts Center in Seoul, ART13 in London as well as the Liverpool Biennale, her works are in many public and private collections. Fridriks has received commissions from Westlotto, Michael Goss Foundation, Ralph Lauren Foundation, Bacardi, Land Rover, Jack Barclay Bentley as well as the French Ministry for Youth & Sports.
